Such a bummer.

12:07:44 From katharine : I watched a documentary here in Denmark about an organization which focused on helping women affected by DV from ethnic minority (mostly Muslim) backgrounds. it occurred to me it might be worth researching if there is anything like that in your area in case you come across a survivor from an ethnic minority background, as there are often specific cultural issues at play that can be hard for Westerners to understand.

12:08:41 From Julie : The Ireland site caught my attention with its tab on male victims....we have so much trouble finding help for men.

- 12:41:02 From Amy : A friend just sent me a text asking for prayers for her client her just lost her baby daughter. This client had recently had a traumatic separation from her husband and had left him suddenly. This client had to take a trip and left her daughter in the baby's dad's care and she died on his watch. They are still getting details but it exemplifies that we know so well how dangerous it can be to leave an unstable, violent and manipulative domestic partner. And this is also why so many of us stay. If you think of it, please pray for Ashely as she navigates the pain and process before her now.

12:55:15 From Amy : My stbx is accusing me of kidnapping our girls and holding them hostage because I left with them due to assault and domestic abuse. This is what is so hard to leave and not continue exposing one's children to worsening abuse. It is so painful and continues to leave us in fear and isolation.... but.... slowly, with great resources, I am praying the Custody Investigator and our judge will understand the truth of the abuse in our family.
